LOST INDIAN KNOWLEDGE

SENTINEL REPORTER SPEAKS

THE HAUNTED MEADOW LEGEND

AFTERNOON TALKS AND ILLUSTRATED LECTURES

"THE SANTA CRUZ WE NEVER KNEW"
BRYDIS BUCHANAN, 1:30 until 3:00 p.m.
in the Cowell Library.

Before white settlers came to Santa Cruz, the native Costanoan Indian Tribe had learned how to use the wild plants in the forest for food, clothing, shelter and medicine. Brydis Buchanan discusses a knowledge of this region, all but lost today, and presents displays that are as practical as they are fascinating for those who inhabit this land in 1972. If you have never heard her speak, do not miss this opportunity; it is an experience you will long remember.

"THE CITY OF YESTERDAY"
MARGARET KOCH, 2:30 until 3:30 p.m.
in Cowell College Room 113.

Santa Cruz at the turn of the century was a town with exciting stories and colorful characters. Margaret Koch, regional history writer for the Santa Cruz Sentinel, will illustrate her talk on this chapter of the city's history with marvelous slides made from a special collection of early photographs.

"UCSC REGIONAL HISTORY PROJECT AND THE OLD COWELL RANCH"
ELIZABETH SPEDDING CALCIANO, 3:30 until 4:30 p.m., Cowell Library.

Have you ever wondered what some of the old ranch buildings at the bottom of the campus were used for? Or have you ever wanted to know how much truth there is to the legend of the haunted meadow? Here is your chance to find out. Elizabeth Calciano, director of UCSC's Regional History Project, will discuss her work and what she has found out about the ranch. A question-and-answer period will follow the talk and Mrs. Calciano shall try to satisfy your curiosity about any aspect of Santa Cruz history.

A FIRESIDE CHAT WITH FRANK F. LATTA
4:30 p.m. in the Cowell Fireside Lounge

Since 1906, Mr. Latta has been interviewing over 17,000 California pioneers. Hear this fascinating man discuss the old west. Question and answer period will follow the talk.
